SMITH FAMILY RECORDS

Kaua'i Historical Society

MS 43

The history of the Smith family began in Koloa, Hawaii, in 1842 when Dr. James W. Smith and his bride, Melicent Knapp Smith arrived aboard the Sarah Abigail along with fellow Kaua'i missionaries, Rev. and Mrs. George B. Rowell. Smith was 32, and Melicent was 26.

Born in Stamford, Connecticut in 1810 to a farm family, James William Smith became a school teacher at 17, and had a religious conversion at 19. He studied religion for about 3 years until he became ill in 1834 and was unable to complete his studies to enter the ministry. Turning to medicine, he attended the College of Physicians and Surgeons of New York, and proceeded to practice there for about five years. He applied for missionary work in 1840, and married Melicent Knapp. The couple would provide missionary, educational and medical help to the islands for the next 45 years, and establish a family dynasty of service to Kaua'i.

Dr. Jared K. Smith (1849-1897) carried on his father's medical practice – his life ended tragically when he was murdered by a victim of leprosy. His sister, Juliette, ran the Koloa Industrial School for Boys.

Another son, William Owen Smith (1848-1929) would become a lawyer, state legislator, and active participant in both the “Bayonet Revolution” which resulted in the Constitution of 1887 under King Kalakaua, and the Committee of Safety, which spearheaded the overthrow of Queen Liliuokalani in 1893, and then serve on the executive council of the provisional government. Later, W.O. Smith and his firm wrote the will for Princess Pauahi Bishop which created the Bishop Estate. As a result of this, Princess Pauahi Bishop recommended to Queen Liliuokalani that he write her will, for the Liliuokalani Trust. As a result, they became lifelong friends, and he defended her in court, winning the suite brought against her by Prince Jonah Kuhio.

In the meantime, his sister Lottie (Charlotte Lee Smith 1845-1896) married Alfred Stedman Hartwell, who was also involved with the political changes of the era. And another sister – Melicent Lena Smith (1854-1943) wed William Waterhouse (1852-1942). While both are Hawaii-born, they would spend 20 years in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, then move to Pasadena, California where William Waterhouse serves a term as Mayor. Their Cedar Rapids, Iowa years were spent with William's involved in the Waterhouse businesses developed there by his father. After his father's death, William and Lena moved to Pasadena, and the family business interests in Iowa were eventually sold. William remained extremely involved in the church, even doing some volunteer work in his “retirement” prior to their final move back to Kauai, where they spent their final years.

MS 43 Smith Family, p. 3

Their son, Dr. Alfred Herbert Waterhouse (1877-1948) became the third generation of the medical family serving Kauai, as company doctor for Koloa and McBryde Plantations, later going into private practice. Dr. Waterhouse is also known for his efforts to develop affordable housing and educational opportunities for sugar plantation workers and their children.

The materials in this collection follow the Alfred Herbert Waterhouse family line though yet another generation –William Allen, and his two sisters: Florence Melicent and Marjorie May Waterhouse and their families complete this interesting collection of items.

This collection of materials, which include photocopies of photographs, newspaper articles, chapters of books, and typed reminiscences of family members, gives us a peek at the extended Smith and Waterhouse families beginning in the mid 1800s for more than a century.

Donated by William and Barbara May Waterhouse McCord in 2001.

Scope and Content

All materials within this collection are photocopies of original items, and photocopies of photographs. The family has been excellent in identifying the individuals in photographs, and we have strived to mention all names in the inventory list to assist researchers in locating information about family members.

The collection is comprised of photographs, newspaper articles, and items from books. Additionally, there are a few handwritten notes, and letters between family members. Most items have author and source information.

The material has been arranged chronologically as much as possible – James William and Melicent Knapp Smith family items follow a small selection of genealogies - files on their children are then arranged by birth order. One file contains articles on Smith family members which are from this early era.

The bulk of the material is of the Lena and William Waterhouse generation, followed by materials on their son, Dr. A.H. Waterhouse and his family members.

Their various descendants are arranged in their own file, in similar order.

One file contains miscellaneous items about relatives including newspaper articles and obituaries, photographs and handwritten or typed letters and notes.

Three special files are those related to the William Waterhouse home in Ventura, California; the Koloa and Pasadena Churches which were such an integral part of the family life; and finally, some items on family reunions.
